

Grant Doty served twenty years in the U.S. Army as a combat engineer, an assistant professor of international relations, a strategist, and, in his last job in uniform, a speechwriter. He attended night law school in anticipation of his military retirement.

In his fifteen years as a second-career attorney, Grant has been driven to continue his "service" in a different forum -- engaging in the protection of constitutional, civil, and statutory rights of marginalized, vulnerable, and underserved clients.

Grant received his undergraduate degree from the United States Military Academy at West Point, a graduate degree from Yale University, and a law degree from Georgetown University Law Center.

Grant is married, has two sons and a daughter, and lives in St. Louis, Missouri.